Why?

All schools have responsibilities relating to the safety of children in their care. Paragraph 126 of statutory guidance on Keeping Children Safe in Education, the Department for Education states that children should: “be taught about safeguarding, including in relation to online safety (paragraph 128), that safeguarding training for staff, including online safety training, is integrated, aligned and considered as part of the whole school or college safeguarding approach and wider staff training and curriculum planning.”
